Perspectives on migration

Travel with AFSC as we visit the U.S.-Mexico border, where we will meet with staff members who have monitored human rights abuses for decades, starting long before these issues entered the national conscience.

See the miles-long stretch of dangerous barricades that separate our two countries. Then listen to migrants' stories—and experience a day at our urban farm in Los Angeles where you will see the beauty of the immigrant experience growing all around you.

A visit to the U.S.-Mexico border and Los Angeles

Begins:

May 13, Wednesday evening, San Diego.

Concludes:

May 17, Sunday morning, Los Angeles.

Accommodations:

In downtown San Diego and Los Angeles.

Highlights

The U.S.-Mexico border tour will begin south of San Diego near the San Ysidro port of entry and continue to Friendship Park, the southwestern-most corner of the U.S.-Mexico border. Local AFSC staff will talk with you about the impacts of the wall on border communities and share firsthand accounts of our work.

Travel to Los Angeles to visit AFSC's Roots for Peace downtown urban farm where you'll meet community members working to improve access to healthy foods while addressing racial injustice. Share an outdoor meal in the garden and get a mural tour from AFSC youth leaders.

Visit the Japanese American Museum to learn about AFSC's history of working to overcome injustice, including speaking out against the forced removal and incarceration of Japanese Americans during World War II.
