The struggle for civil rights

Travel with AFSC to visit the newly opened National Memorial for Peace and Justice in Montgomery, Alabama and other iconic sites of the Civil Rights Movement.

Long before the Civil Rights Movement, AFSC identified racism and prejudice as an injustice in U.S. culture—a form of violence that causes immense suffering. AFSC has dedicated itself to advancing racial justice since 1925 and continues to do so to this day, with current AFSC staff working at the intersections of criminal justice, racial discrimination, and civil rights.

A gathering in Montgomery, Alabama

Begins:

March 12, Thursday evening, Montgomery, Alabama.

Concludes:

March 15, Sunday morning, Montgomery, Alabama.

Accommodations:

Located in downtown Montgomery.

Highlights

Hear stories of AFSC staff and others who have demonstrated tremendous courage—often at great personal risk—to stand up for peace and justice. Learn more about AFSC’s work to overcome racism and inequality, through the decades to today.

Tour the National Memorial for Peace and Justice. Situated on a six-acre site overlooking Montgomery, it’s a sacred space for truth-telling and reflection about racial terror in America and its legacy. Hear stories from AFSC alums who were directly involved in the Civil Rights Movement.

Visit key sites from the Civil Rights Movement like the Rosa Parks Museum and the King Memorial Baptist Church, where Martin Luther King, Jr. organized the Montgomery Bus Boycott and other early civil rights activity. Talk with current AFSC staff who will connect this important legacy with our ongoing work for racial justice today.
